WSBA No #41238

Case# 2-17-RD-0001

Division 2.

Pursuant to Local Rule 83.3 (E)

On December 23rd, 2016 I received a 30 month suspension for violating a Rule of Professional Conduct. The Washington State Bar Association determined I had committed an act of moral turpitude when I engaged in a romantic relationship with a client. I take full responsibility for this error in judgment and have subsequently been reinstated to active status as of July 2, 2019.

The relationship from 2013 which lead to my suspension has taught me very much about myself through self-reflection. Back then I was a younger man searching for a suitable companion and the attorney-client relationship was secondary. I looked at several of my coworkers who had met and even later married their clients and never really grasped the magnitude of the situation. I now know that I was wrong to prioritize my own feelings over the Rules of Professional Conduct.

Currently, I am in a committed relationship of over 5 years and would never again put myself in a position to have my integrity questioned. I have made peace with the discipline and have moved forward accordingly.

Warm Regards,

Jason M. Feldman
